So it's been a week since we lost our community. I certainly hope this post does not cause problems for lambert, it's the very last thing I want to do, so please take this down if it will cause problems for you. It's just that I had no place to go, so I came here. As many of us did after the loss of firedoglake. I don't know if the N.C. decision is permanent or not but I've had the good fortune to spend several afternoons all around the waterfall (photo included here [3]) over the last week. While there, pondering all things great and small, I realized I do not want to see the internet experience turn into a megaphone for just a few. Perhaps I'm guilty of saying too much whilst understanding so little in comments, but I value others reflections upon matters too much to just watch it all vanish without saying goodbye this time, if indeed this is goodbye?
